UK Outlook for Monday 21 Jun 2021 to Wednesday 30 Jun 2021:
Unsettled conditions are likely at the start of this period, with a mixture of sunny spells and scattered heavy showers, a risk thunder and perhaps hail, and longer spells of rain are possible in the north and west. Through the first half of next week, Atlantic air looks likely to spread across the country from the west, bringing a change to cooler and more changeable conditions. This will likely bring spells of rain or showers interspersed with periods of dry weather and sunny spells. The driest and brightest conditions are likely in the southeast, though further showers or thunderstorms are possible here. Temperatures are likely to recover to near normal by the end of the month.
